

Prior studies have shown that automated triage reduces handling time by 30%.

The field has long treated triage as a purely technical problem.

